OFFICE ACTION

RESPONSE TIME LIMIT: TO AVOID ABANDONMENT, THE OFFICE MUST RECEIVE A PROPER RESPONSE TO THIS OFFICE ACTION WITHIN 6 MONTHS OF THE MAILING OR E-MAILING DATE.

The assigned trademark examining attorney has reviewed the referenced application and has determined the following:

Search Results

The Office records have been searched and no similar registered or pending mark has been found that would bar registration under Trademark Act Section 2(d), 15 U.S.C. §1052(d). TMEP §704.02.

Section 2(e)(1) - Descriptive Refusal

Registration is refused because the proposed mark merely describes a feature, function, use, benefit and or characteristic of the applicant's services. Trademark Act Section 2(e)(1), 15 U.S.C. §1052(e)(1); TMEP §§1209 et seq.

A mark is merely descriptive under Trademark Act Section 2(e)(1), 15 U.S.C. 1052(e)(1), if it describes an ingredient, quality, characteristic, function, feature, purpose or use of the relevant goods and/or services. In re Gyulay, 820 F.2d 1216, 3 USPQ2d 1009 (Fed. Cir. 1987); In re Bed & Breakfast Registry, 791 F.2d 157, 229 USPQ 818 (Fed. Cir. 1986); In re MetPath Inc., 223 USPQ 88 (TTAB 1984); In re Bright-Crest, Lid, 204 USPQ 591 (TTAB 1979); TMEP section 1209.0 1(b).

It is not necessary that a term describe all of the purposes, functions, characteristics or features of the goods and/or services to be merely descriptive. It is enough if the term or terms describe one attribute of the goods and/or services. In re H.UD.D.L.E., 216 USPQ 358 (TTAB 1982); In re MBAssociates, 180 USPQ 338 (TTAB 1973). Furthermore, one must consider a mark not in abstract, but in relation to services for which registration is sought, in the context in which designation is being used, and the possible significance that term would have to average prospective purchaser in determining whether designation is merely descriptive.

In this application the applicant has applied to register the mark FragranceNet. The mark is merely descriptive of the purpose, feature, function, use, benefit and/or characteristic of the services that are the subject of the application. Specifically, a computer based network featuring fragrances and/or a supply network featuring fragrances. The dictionary definitions of the word elements are instructive as to the descriptiveness of the mark and the definitions are attached hereto.

The proposed mark immediately informs the purchaser/user at least one feature, function, characteristic and/or the subject matter of the applicant's Entertainment services and online information services. As the applicant's mark indicates to potential purchasers a feature, function, characteristic, and/or subject matter of the applicant's goods and/or services, the mark is merely descriptive of those services, and registration is refused.

Response

Although the examining attorney has refused registration, the applicant may respond to the refusal to register by submitting evidence and arguments in support of registration.

Supplemental Register

Although the trademark examining attorney has refused registration on the Principal Register, applicant may respond to the stated refusal(s) under 2(e)(1) by amending the application to seek registration on the Supplemental Register. Trademark Act Section 23, 15 U.S.C. §1091; 37 C.F.R. §§2.47 and 2.75(a); TMEP §§801.02(b), 815 and 816 et seq.

Although Supplemental Register registration does not afford all the benefits of registration on the Principal Register, it does provide the following advantages:

- The registrant may use the registration symbol ®;
- The registration is protected against registration of a confusingly similar mark under §2(d) of the Trademark Act, 15 U.S.C. §1052(d);
- The registrant may bring suit for infringement in federal court; and
- The registration may serve as the basis for a filing in a foreign country under the Paris Convention and other international agreements.

New TEAS Plus Filing System

On July 18, 2005, the USPTO introduced a new version of the application for a Trademark/Service mark, Principal Register. The TEAS Plus form features a lower filing fee of $275 per class of goods and/or services (the TEAS form fee is $325 per class of goods and/or services), but has stricter filing requirements than the regular TEAS form. Applicants are encouraged to read more about this new alternative filing program at the following site:

OFFICE ACTION

RESPONSE TIME LIMIT: TO AVOID ABANDONMENT, THE OFFICE MUST RECEIVE A PROPER RESPONSE TO THIS OFFICE ACTION WITHIN 6 MONTHS OF THE MAILING OR E-MAILING DATE.

This Office action responds to the applicant's correspondence of November 8, 2006. In its response the applicant made a claim of acquired distinctiveness under Section 2(f). The examining attorney has considered the claim but it is insufficient. Because this is a new issue the refusal under section 2(e)(1) is continued and a new refusal issued as to the sufficiency of the 2(f) claim.

Acquired Distinctiveness

Applicant has asserted acquired distinctiveness based on five years' use in commerce. However, because the applied-for mark is highly descriptive of applicant's goods and/or services, the allegation of five years' use is insufficient to show acquired distinctiveness. In re Kalmbach Publ'g Co., 14 USPQ2d 1490 (TTAB 1989); TMEP §1212.05(a). Additional evidence is needed.

This evidence may include specific dollar sales under the mark, advertising figures, samples of advertising, consumer or dealer statements of recognition of the mark, and any other evidence that establishes the distinctiveness of the mark as an indicator of source. The Office will decide each case on its own merits.

If additional evidence is submitted, the following factors are generally considered: (1) length and exclusivity of use by applicant of the mark in the United States; (2) the type, expense and amount of advertising of the mark in the United States; and (3) applicant's efforts, such as unsolicited media coverage and consumer studies, in the United States to associate the mark with the source of the goods and/or services identified in the application. In re Steelbuilding.com, 415 F.3d 1293, 1300, 75 U.S.P.Q.2d 1420, 1424 (Fed. Cir. 2005). A showing of acquired distinctiveness need not consider each of these factors, and no single factor is determinative. Id.; see 37 C.F.R. §2.41; TMEP §§1212 et seq.

The amount and character of evidence needed to establish acquired distinctiveness depends on the facts of each case and particularly on the nature of the mark sought to be registered. See Roux Laboratories, Inc. v. Clairol Inc., 427 F.2d 823, 166 USPQ 34 (C.C.P.A. 1970); In re Hehr Mfg. Co., 279 F.2d 526, 126 USPQ 381 (C.C.P.A. 1960); In re Gammon Reel, Inc., 227 USPQ 729 (TTAB 1985). More evidence is needed where a mark is so highly descriptive that purchasers seeing the matter in relation to the named goods and/or services would be less likely to believe that it indicates source in any one party. See, e.g., In re Bongrain International Corp., 894 F.2d 1316, 13 USPQ2d 1727 (Fed. Cir. 1990); In re Seaman & Associates, Inc., 1 USPQ2d 1657 (TTAB 1986); In re Packaging Specialists, Inc., 221 USPQ 917 (TTAB 1984). However, no amount of purported proof that a generic term has acquired secondary meaning can transform that term into a registrable trademark. Such a designation cannot become a trademark under any circumstances. See Miller Brewing Co. v. G. Heileman Brewing Co., 561 F.2d 75, 195 USPQ 281 (7th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1025, 196 USPQ 592 (1978).

SO ORDERED

Kremen v. Cohen (Order Granting Summary Adjudication)

United States District Court, Northern District of California

November 27, 2000

6 ILR (P&F) 755

No. C 98-20718 JW

IC 11 — Forged transfer document renders purported domain name transfer void.

Plaintiff's motion to have the domain "sex.com" restored in plaintiff's name is granted because defendant used a forged letter from plaintiff's associate as the sole basis to effect the transfer of the name to defendant. The forged letter renders the transfer void ab initio and a complete nullity. The domain name is a form of intangible personal property, and the proper remedy for an invalid transfer of such property is to restore the parties to the position that they were in before the transfer. Further, the mere fact that plaintiff registered the name under his fictitious business entity alias does not change plaintiff's status as the rightful owner of the domain. The business is a fiction, and so too is any implication that the business is a legal entity separate from its owner that could have any ownership interest in the domain name. — Kremen v. Cohen (Order Granting Summary Adjudication), 6 ILR (P&F) 755 [ND Cal, 2000].

IP 2.4 — Generic domain name not entitled to trademark protection.

The domain name "sex.com" is a generic term that does not qualify for trademark protection. Defendants claim that plaintiff, who asserts a prior claim to ownership of the domain name, cannot use the name because defendants have trademark rights in the name. The ".com" suffix is not a relevant part of a claimed trademark because it is a generic locator for domain name web sites dedicated to commercial use and cannot be used to create a valid trademark for a second-level domain name ("sex") that is a generic term. Under the Ninth Circuit's "who-are-you/what-are-you" test, a term is generic if it fails to answer the question "Who are you?" Neither "sex" nor "sex.com" reveal anything about who runs the web site <sex.com>, where it comes from, or who vouches for it. Further, such a weak descriptive mark could be a valid trademark only with a strong showing of acquired secondary meaning. Defendants, however, are unable to show that a substantial number of sex.com's customers or potential customers associate the term with the services provided by defendants. — Kremen v. Cohen (Order Granting Summary Adjudication), 6 ILR (P&F) 755 [ND Cal, 2000].

ORDER GRANTING MOTION FOR SUMMARY ADJUDICATION

I. INTRODUCTION

JAMES WARE, U.S. District Judge. Plaintiff Gary Kremen ("Kremen") moves for summary adjudication of his claims for declaratory relief and Defendants' claims and defenses for trademark infringement. Defendants oppose the motion. The Court has read the moving and responding papers and has considered the oral arguments of counsel presented on Monday, November 27, 2000. For the reasons set forth below, the motion is granted.

II. BACKGROUND

For the sake of brevity, the Court will not recite all the allegations in the operative complaint.[1] The lawsuit arises out of Defendants' alleged misappropriation of the internet domain name, "sex.com." It is undisputed that Plaintiff registered "sex.com" with Network Solutions, Inc. ("NSI"),[2] under the fictitious business name Online Classified Inc. (OCI) on May 9, 1994. (Kremen Declaration, ¶5.) Kremen in his NSI registration from listed OCI as the registering organization and himself as the administrative, technical, and zone contact. (Id.; see also, Kremen Decl., Ex. B.)[3] It is also undisputed that through his dba OCI, Kremen was the first to register the domain name "sex.com" with NSI, (Kremen Decl. ¶¶7, 6; see also Kremen Decl. Ex. C.)

In October 1995, Defendant Stephen Cohen ("Cohen") sent a letter to NSI where "Sharon Dimmick," the supposed President of OCI, agreed to transfer its rights to the "sex.com" domain name to Cohen. The October 15, 1995 letter ("Dimmick letter") states that Sharon Dimmick is the president of OCI, that Kremen had been fired from OCI, and that Dimmick and Cohen had "numerous conversations." (Wagstaffe Decl. Ex. A.) The letter allows Cohen to use the "sex.com" domain name and permits him to personally notify NSI of her company's authorized transfer of the name to Cohen's corporation because OCI (a company dedicated to internet service) did not have access to an Internet connection. (Id.) After submitting this letter to NSI, Cohen sent e-mails to NSI to effectuate the transfer of the domain name "sex.com." (Wagstaffe Decl., Ex. B, E-mail from Cohen to NSI.)[4] Consequently, NSI transferred the domain name registration for "sex.com" to Stephen Cohen and his company.

Sharyn Dimmick was Kremen's housemate in October 1995. It is undisputed that she did not sign or have anything to do with the Dimmick letter. Defendants offer no contrary admissible evidence.[5] Ms. Dimmick submitted an affidavit confirming that she had no in-

[1] This case has already gone through an inordinate amount of motion practice, and the parties are more than familiar with the allegations in the Complaint.

[2] Kremen actually registered the domain name with Internic, a domain-name registering organization which subsequently became part of Network Solutions, Inc. For a thorough discussion of the registration process during the period at issue here, see Oppedahl & Larson v. Network Solutions, Inc., 3 F Supp 2d 1147, 1149-50 [2 ILR (P&F) 651] (D Colo. 1998).

[3] The administrative contact is the contact for administrative and policy questions about the domain name. The technical contact is the contact point for problems with the domain name and for updating information about the name. The zone contact is the contact point for problems with the computer server that hosts the domain name.

[4] Cohen's e-mail to NSI left Kremen as the contact but placed his own e-mail address and telephone number as the contact information.

[5] The only evidence Cohen offers, which remotely contradicts such a conclusion, is that the Dimmick letter was signed at OCI's mailing address and that Cohen believed that the Dimmick letter was signed by Dimmick because "Mr. Franco went up to the apartment and returned with the signed letter." (Cohen Declaration in Support of Opposition to Plaintiff's Motion for Summary Judgment, ¶10.) Further, Cohen asserts that be believed he was dealing with a legitimate representative of OCI, and even paid that person $1000. (Id.). However, there is no admissible evidence which shows that Franco met Dimmick or someone purporting to be Dimmick or that Dimmick signed the October 15, 2000 letter, or that $1000 was paid to her.

volvement with creating or authorizing the letter, was unaware of its contents, and had never met or heard of Cohen. (Wagstaffe Decl. Ex. D, Affidavit of Sharyn Dimmick.) At her deposition, Dimmick verified the statements in her affidavit and again confirmed that she never signed the Dimmick letter. (Wagstaffe Decl. Ex. C, Deposition of Sharyn Dimmick.) She further confirmed that she had no knowledge of, or involvement in, Online Classifieds, Inc., nor did she have any knowledge of, or involvement with, the domain name "sex.com." Indeed, Dimmick had no authority to act on behalf of OCI, a company of which she had no knowledge and with which she had no involvement. Dimmick and Cohen both testified that they had never spoken to each other, (Wagstaffe Decl. Ex. C & Ex. E, Cohen Deposition at 179.22-27), and therefore, the first line of the Dimmick letter describing "numerous conversations" between Cohen and Dimmick was knowingly false. In fact, Ms. Dimmick's first name is misspelled in the letter. She goes by the name "Sharyn" and not "Sharon." (Wagstaffe Decl. Ex. C, Deposition of Sharon Dimmick.)

Moreover, Cohen admitted that he was involved in the drafting of the Dimmick letter. Cohen admits that he and Vito Franco ("Franco"), who is now deceased, generated the stationery and letterhead on their own, although neither man had any connection to Online Classifieds, Inc. [Wagstaffe Decl., Ex. E (Cohen Depo. At 174:23-28); Wagstaffe Decl., Ex. F (Cohen Responses to Requests for Admissions, June 30, 2000.)] Cohen also admits Franco typed the text of the Dimmick letter at Cohen's request. [Wagstaffe Declaration, Ex. E (Cohen Depo. At 174:12-17, 5:20, 177:18-19), Ex. F (Cohen Admissions, Nos. 4-5.)] Cohen asserts that he allegedly paid (through Franco) Ms. Dimmick or someone purporting to be Ms. Dimmick $1,000.00 for the rights to sex.com. (Wagstaffe Decl., Ex. E, Cohen Depo. At 650-652.)] There is, however, no record of such payment and the Dimmick letter notably omits any reference to such or any consideration for the transfer.

According to the foregoing, Plaintiff seeks summary adjudication of its motion for declaratory relief. Specifically, Plaintiff asks the Court to determine who owns the domain name "sex.com"[6] and to find that Defendants' claims and defenses for trademark infringement are meritless.

[6] Network Solutions, Inc. has already deposited the domain name "sex.com" within the Court's jurisdiction and has authorized such a transfer back to Kremen if the Court should so order. (Ellen Gutowski Declaration, attached as Exhibit F to James W. Wagstaffe's Supplemental Declaration.)

III. LEGAL STANDARD

Summary judgment should be granted if there is no genuine issue of material fact and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(e); Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 US 242, 247-248 (1986). The standard applied to a motion seeking summary judgment is identical to the standard applied to a motion seeking summary judgment of the entire case. Urantia Foundation v. Maaherra, 895 F Supp 1335, (D. Ariz. 1995). The moving party "always bears the initial responsibility of informing the district court of the basis for its motion, and identifying those portions of 'the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any' which it believes demonstrate the absence of a genuine issue of material fact." Celotex v. Catrett, 477 US 317, 323, (1986) (citations omitted). If the moving party meets this initial burden, the burden shifts to the non-moving party to present specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(e); Celotex, 477 US at 324. The facts brought forth must be material, i.e., "facts that might affect the outcome of the suit under the governing law . . . Factual disputes that are irrelevant or unnecessary will not be counted." Anderson, 477 US at 247-248.

It is the court's responsibility "to determine whether the 'specific facts' set forth by the nonmoving party, coupled with undisputed background or contextual facts, are such that a rational or reasonable jury might return a verdict in its favor based on that evidence." T.W. Elec. Service v. Pacific Elec. Contractors, 809 F2d 626, 631 (9th Cir 1987). A genuine material issue for trial exists, if the non-moving party presents evidence from which a reasonably jury, viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to that party, could resolve the material issue in his or her favor. Id. at 248-249; Barlow v. Ground, 943 F2d 1132, 1134-1135 (9th Cir 1991). However, "[w]here the record taken as a whole could not lead a rational trier of fact to find for the nonmoving party, there is no 'genuine issue for trial.'" Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio, 475 US 574, 587 (1986).

IV. DISCUSSION

A. Declaratory Relief

The central questions before the Court are 1) whether the Dimmick letter was forged; 2) what is the effect of a transfer of a property interest effectuated by a forged document; and 3) what is the proper remedy for such a transfer?

A forgery is a "writing which falsely purports to be the writing of another." Generes v. Justice Ct., 106 Cal. App. 3d 678, 682 (1980); Wutzke v. Bill Reid Painting Service, Inc., 151 Cal. App. 3d 36, 40-44 (1984). Defendants assert that "[p]laintiff has not sustained his burden of even establishing that the Dimmick letter is a fraud." (Defendants' Opposition at 39:9-10.) Defendants support this argument by attacking Dimmick's credibility. Specifically, they accuse Dimmick of "[l]ying under oath about delivering documents proving that someone she knew actually signed [the Dimmick letter]." (Id. at 39:10-11.) Defendants' attack on Dimmick is unwarranted and provides no defense. While there is no evidence that Dimmick lied under oath, (Id.), such attacks on Dimmick's credibility do not even create a triable issue of fact. Crawford-El v. Britton, 523 US 574 (1998); Canada v. Blain's Helicopters, Inc., 831 F2d 920, 925 (9th Cir 1987). Accordingly, and based on the undisputed facts, the Court finds that the October 15, 1995 Dimmick letter, which purported to transfer the "sex.com" domain name from Gary Kremen to Stephen Michael Cohen, is a forgery.[7]

"It has been uniformly established that a forged document is void ab initio and constitutes a nullity; as such it cannot provide the basis for superior title as against the original [owner]." Wutzke, 151 Cal. App. 3d at 40-44. In Wutzke, the Court indicated that "there is no reason in law or policy why the principle that forged documents are void should not apply to an instrument through which an interest in property is passed." Id. at 43-44. Defendants do not appear to dispute the application of this principle to the transfer of domain names nor do they dispute the application of this principle to the Dimmick letter.

Defendants relying on Kremen v. Cohen, 99 F Supp 2d 1169 [5 ILR (P&F) 435] (ND Cal. 2000), do argue in their cross-motion for summary judgment that a domain names is not a form of intangible personal property. This argument, however, is without merit as this Court has already recognized that a domain name is a form of intangible property. Kremen, 99 F Supp 2d at 1173 ("NSI contends that a domain name is a form of intangible property . . . The Court concurs."); see also, Cal. Civ. Code §§655, 654; Yuba River Power Co. v. Nevada Irrigation Dist., 207 Cal. 521, 523 (1929) (stating that property includes "everything which one person can own and transfer to another. It extends to every species of right and interest capable of being enjoyed as such upon which it is practicable to place a money value."); McCord v. Plotnick, 108 Cal. App. 2d 392, 395 (1952) ("In a court of equity 'if that which complainant has acquired fairly at substantial cost may be soled fairly at substantial profit, a competitor who is misappropriating it for the purposes of disposing of it to his own profit and to the disadvantage of complainant cannot be heard to say that it is too fugitive or evanescent to be regarded as property.")

The Court therefore finds that this principle which establishes that a forged document is void ab initio and constitutes a nullity to the transfer of domain names just as with other interests in property. In this case, Cohen's claim to title to the "sex.com" domain name depends solely on the forged Dimmick letter. Accordingly, the Court finds that the transfer of the domain name "sex.com" from Kremen to Cohen was void ab initio and constitutes a nullity. As for subsequent transfers among the Defendants, the Court finds that they are similarly void. "Title, like a stream, cannot rise higher than its source. No one can, therefore, transfer a better title than he has." Barthelmess v. Cavalier, 2 Cal. App. 2d 477, 487-488 (1934); see also Wutzke, 151 Cal. Appl 3d at 44; Suburban Motors, Inc. v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 218 Cal. App. 3d 1354, 1361 (1990).

The proper remedy for such an invalid transfer is to return to the parties to the position that they were before the transfer. Reay v. Reay, 97 Cal. App. 264, 277 (1929) ("Assuming that the transaction should not have taken place the court proceeds as though it had not taken place, and returns the parties to that situation."). Again, Defendants do not challenge the application of this legal principle to the instant case. Rather, Defendants argue that the status quo prior to the transfer was that Kremen was not the owner of the "sex.com" domain name as it was registered to OCI.[8] Defendants

[7] Defendants also assert that the alleged "apparent authority given Ms. Dimmick (or whoever resided in the office of Online Classifieds, Inc. at 242 Cole St.) preclude[s] Kremen from disputing the conveyance by Dimmick." (Defendants' Opposition at 40-1-4.) Neither the record nor the law, however, support Cohen's assertion. First of all, "[o]stensible authority is not established by the statements and representations of the agent. It created only by the acts or declarations of the principle." People v. Surety Ins. Co., 136 Cal. App. 3d 556, 562 (1982). That is, "apparent authority is created, and its scope defined, by the acts of the principle in placing the agent in such a position that he appears to have the authority which he claims or exercises." Blanton v. Womancare, Inc., 38 Cal. 3d 396, 406 (1985). There is no admissible evidence which shows that Kremen, the principle, cloaked or vested Dimmick (or any other such individual) with the apparent authority to act on his behalf.

[8] Defendants also argue that there is a triable issue of fact as to whether OCI was Kremen's sole proprietorship. Defendants, though, fail to offer admissible evidence which shows that OCI was anything other than Kremen's fictitious business name. Alternatively, Defendants contend that Electric Classifieds, Inc., or Online Classifieds, Inc. (which was incorporated in 1998) possess an ownership interest in the domain name "sex.com." The record is devoid, though, of any admissible evidence which shows that anyone other than Kremen and his dba OCI possess an ownership interest in the domain name "sex.com." While Online Classifieds Inc. did change its name to Electric Classifieds, Inc. in the summer of 1994, ECI has repeatedly denied any ownership interest in "sex.com."

assertion though, at a minimum, requires returning the registration of the domain name to how it existed before the invalid October 1995 transfer—with Kremen as the administrative, technical and zone contact and with OCI (Kremen's dba) as the "organization" on whose behalf Kremen registered the domain name. However, as there is no distinction between Kremen and his fictitious business entity (OCI) Kremen is the rightful owner of "sex.com." Pinkerton's Inc. v. Superior Court (Schrieber), 49 Cal. App. 4th 1342, 1348 ("Doing business under another name does not create an entity distinct from the person operating the business. The business is a fiction, and so too is any implication that the business is a legal entity separate from its owner."); see also, Seidl v. Greentree Mortgage Co., 30 F Supp 2d 1292, 1300 (D Colo. 1998) (individual had standing to sue corporation that improperly used the internet domain name registered by his dba).[9] Accordingly, Kremen is entitled to restoration of the "sex.com" domain name registration.

B. Trademark Infringement

Defendants assert that Plaintiff cannot use the domain name "sex.com" because it would violate their trademark rights to the term sex.com.[10] To establish a claim for trademark infringement, a mark holder must prove "(1) ownership of a valid mark, (2) use by the defendant of the same or similar mark, and (3) that there is a likelihood of confusion." Alchemy II, Inc. v. Yes! Entertainment Corp., 844 F Supp 560, 569 (CD Cal. 1994). If the mark at issue is not federally registered, the party asserting that the mark is valid has the burden of proving that it is protectible. Filipino Yellow Pages, Inc. v. Asian Journal Publication, Inc., 198 F3d 1143, 1146 (9th Cir 1999). Hence, because Defendants concede "sex.com" is not federally registered they have the initial burden of establishing that "sex.com" is protectible. Plaintiff asserts that the term "sex.com" is generic and therefore unprotectible. Id. (where the allegedly infringing party asserts genericness as a defense the party claiming trademark infringement has the burden of proving nongenericness). "If the term is generic, it cannot be the subject of trademark protection under any circumstances, even with a showing of secondary meaning." Id.

"Sex" and "sex.com" are generic terms, and, as such, cannot be registered as trademarks.[11] "Generic terms are those used by the public to refer generally to the product rather than a particular brand of product." Brookfield Communications, Inc. v. West Coast Entertainment Corp., 174 F3d 1036, 1058 n. 19 [2 ILR (P&F) 492] (9th Cir 1999) (citations omitted); see also, Park 'N Fly, Inc. v. Dollar Park and Fly, Inc., 469 US 189, 194 ("A generic term is one that refers to the genus of which the particular product is a species.")

Under the Ninth Circuit's "who-are-you/what-are-you test," a term is generic if it fails to answer the question "Who are you?" Filipino Yellow Pages, Inc., 198 F3d at 1147. Neither "sex" nor "sex.com" answers the question "Who are you?" These terms, "sex" and "sex.com," do not reveal anything about "who" runs the website "sex.com" or "where" it comes from, or "who vouches" for it. Filipino Yellow Pages, Inc., 198 F3d at (Declaration of Kevin Kunzleman, ¶¶5, 7, attached as Ex. H. to Wagstaffe's Supplemental Declaration; ECI Declaration attached as Exhibit G to Wagstaffe's Reply Declaration to Defendants Cross Motion for Summary Judgment). In addition, on Cohen's motion to dismiss, this Court agreed that Online Classifieds, Inc., the Delaware corporation (as opposed to Kremen's dba), is not the owner of the "sex.com" domain name. See March 22, 1999 Order.

[9] In addition, in their Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment Defendants' argue that under California Business & Professions Code §17918 both Kremen's use of a dba without filing a fictitious business name statement and his use of the word "Inc." in his fictitious name preclude him from maintaining this action. However, Kremen's failure to register his fictitious name and his inclusion of the word "Inc." does not invalidate Kremen's ownership of "sex.com" nor does it prevent him from advancing the instant causes of action. See, e.g., Hydrotech Sys., Ltd. v. Oasis Waterpark, 52 Cal. 3d 988, 1001 n. 8 (1991). Indeed, disallowing Kremen's claims under Cohen's reading of §17918 would ignore the central purpose of the statute, as "[t]he statute's purpose is not served by extending its protection to one who has committed a tort against a fictitiously named business." Id.

[10] While the Court will assess Defendants' argument on the merits, it notes that owning a trademark would not justify the misappropriation of another entity's registered domain name. "The law does not condone 'self-help' for the victim of one wrong in the form of his commission of another legal violation of his own." Horn Abbott Ltd. v. Sarsaparilla Ltd., 601 F Supp 360, 370 (ND Ill. 1984).

[11] The domain name "sex.com" is comprised of a top-level domain name (.com) and a second level domain name ("sex"). Courts have held that the ".com" suffix is not a relevant part of a claimed trademark because it is a generic locator for domain name web sites dedicated to commercial use. See, e.g., Brookfield Communications, Inc. v. West Coast Entertainment Corp., 174 F3d 1036, 1055 [2 ILR (P&F) 492] (9th Cir 1999); Northern Light Technology v. Northern Lights Club, 97 F Supp 2d 96, 110 [5 ILR (P&F) 191] (D Mass. 2000); CCBN.com, Inc. v. c-call.com, Inc., 73 F Supp 2d 106, 112 [4 ILR (P&F) 340] (D Mass. 1999). Cohen, however, contends that he has used the term "sex.com" in his French Connection Electronic Bulletin Board since 1979. Cohen's claim is questionable as the "dot-com" nomenclature was not recognized until 1984. Moreover, if Cohen claims superior right to the trademark "sex.com," presumably his domain name would be "sex.com.com." Nonetheless, the Court concludes that the term "sex.com," like "sex," is generic.

1147. The primary significance of these terms is to describe the type of product offered rather than the producer (i.e., Ynata, Ltd.), and therefore "sex" and "sex.com" are, by definition, generic. Id. at 1147; New Kids on The Block v. New America Publ'g., Inc., 971 F2d 302, 306 (9th Cir 1992). It does not appear that Defendants have offered evidence of nongenericness sufficient to overcome their burden of proof.

Defendants, however, argue that "sex.com" is a valid descriptive trademark because it has acquired secondary meaning. Even assuming that the term "sex.com" is not generic the term is "perilously close to the 'generic' line." Filipino Yellow Pages, Inc., 198 F3d at 1151 (citation omitted). "Such a weak descriptive mark could be a valid trademark only with a strong showing of strong secondary meaning." Id. "The burden of proving secondary meaning is on the party asserting it." Yamaha Int'l Corp. v. Hashino Gakki Co., 840 F2d 1572, 1578-1579 (Fed. Cir. 1988).

"Secondary meaning has been defined as association, nothing more. The basic element of secondary meaning has been defined as association by a substantial segment of consumers and potential customers 'between the alleged mark and a single source of the product.' " Levi Strauss & Co. v. Blue Bell, Inc., 778 F2d 1352, 1354 (9th Cir 1985) (en banc) (internal citations omitted). To establish that a descriptive term has secondary meaning, defendants "must show that primary significance of the term in the minds of the consuming public is not the product but the producer." Kellog Co. v. National Biscuit Co., 305 US 111, 118 (1938); see also, Transgo Inc. v. Ajac Transmission Part Corp., 768 F2d 1001, 1015 (9th Cir 1984).

Thus, to avoid summary judgment Defendants must show that a substantial number of sex.com's customers or potential customers associate the term "sex.com" with the services provided by Defendants. The only evidence of secondary meaning offered by Defendants is declarations from thirteen individuals who claim to have used the French Connection Bulletin Board System for various lengths of time since the late 1970s, and who claim that the term "sex.com" was part of the bulletin board. These declarations do not show any secondary meaning of association of the term "sex.com" with Defendants' products. Moreover, these declarations on their own are insufficient to show that such secondary meaning was held by a "substantial number" of Defendants' customers and potential customers (those who consume internet pornography).[12] Defendants do not even show that consumers of pornography associate particular images available at their site with a particular producer. In sum, Defendants fail to establish secondary meaning for "sex.com."

Accordingly, "sex.com," even if descriptive rather than generic, is not a valid and protectible trademark, with respect to a web site delivering pornography to the internet community. Hence, Defendants claim to superior trademark right fails as a matter of law.

V. CONCLUSION

Based on the foregoing it is hereby ordered that:

(1) Plaintiff Gary Kremen's Motion for Summary Adjudication on Claims for Declaratory Relief is granted;

(2) Network Solutions, Inc., shall restore registration of the "sex.com" domain name to Gary Kremen; and

(3) Plaintiff's partial summary judgment motion with respect to Defendants' trademark claims is granted.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

[12] Significantly, the Ninth Circuit has noted that "[t]rademark law is skeptical of the ability of an associate of a trademark holder to transcend personal biases to give an impartial account of the value of the holder's mark" and that testimony from such people has little probative value. Self Realization Fellowship Church v. Ananda Church of Self-Realization, 59 F3d 902, 910, 912 (9th Cir 1995). The most persuasive method of proving secondary meaning is through a scientific survey of the irrelevant market. Vision Sports, Inc. v. Melville Corp, 888 F2d 609, 615 (9th Cir 1995).
